

Features

The adult shell length is generally 7-8 cm, and the maximum can grow to more than 20 cm.

The shell is slightly fusiform, about 8 cm high, Shell surface white or yellow, with reddish-brown stripes or burnt brown cloud pattern; No operculum, when encountering dryness or hibernation secretes milky white mucus membrane to close the shell opening.

Other information

Viruses: Spread tuberculosis and eosinophilic meningitis.

Scope of harm: The object of harm includes crops, trees, fruit trees, vegetables, flowers and other plants, when hungry, they also eat paper and the bodies of their companions, and even chew and digest cement, which can harm more than 500 crops